

BLACK HISTORY AWARENESS 365

Join the Black History Awareness Committee as we engage our campus community yearlong with events related to Black History. As we all know Black History is more than a month of engagement, it is 365 days a year. Each year for Black History Month there is a theme. This year's theme is The Black Family: Representation, Identity, and Diversity where we explore the African diaspora, and the spread of Black families across the United States. We invite students, faculty, staff, and the greater Lansing community to join us during our virtual gatherings, discussions, and engage via social media.

If you would like to dive deeper, take the challenge to research on your own! There is an abundance of content online that highlights the history of the African diaspora and the black experience. Further, see what your favorite local organizations and publications are doing to celebrate Black History year-long. Check out this page for a list of podcast, book, and film suggestions.

Learning your history makes you - and your people - stronger. As Black people, we know we're left out of the history books. That the media images are skewed. That we need access to experts, information, and ideas so we can advance our people. Black History Year connects you to the history, thinkers, and activists that are left out of the mainstream conversations.

Objects hold history. They're evocative of stories stamped in time. As part of The Washington Post's coverage of the Smithsonian's new National Museum of African American History and Culture, people submitted dozens of objects that make up their own lived experiences of black history, creating a "people's museum" of personal objects, family photos and more. The Historically Black podcast brings those objects and their stories to life through interviews, archival sound, and music.
