Limited Public Comment Regarding Agenda Items

Cruz Villarreal: My name is Cruz Villarreal and I am a peer writing assistant with LCC’s Writing Center. I would like to read into the record the letter that was sent to President Knight and all of the Trustees. I come to you with the hope of receiving a reply to an inquiry that involves issues of personal responsibility for a disregard of dignity and lack of respect toward four Writing Center Peer Writing Assistants (PWA). The LCC Writing Center has been instrumental in providing students with much needed and appreciated aid at all levels of writing. The center has long been a resource used by instructors for directing students that need that little extra help with a paper, and are always pleased with the result. Unfortunately, many students are turned away due to unavailability of staff to handle the ever-growing demand for PWA assistance. A situation has arisen that will compel a least three extremely competent PWA’s to leave after this semester. This will result in an educational hardship for many deserving students who already find it difficult to schedule a much needed appointment. This problem is the consequence of forgoing a long standing practice of reclassification of newly hired PWA’s that have been field tested and approved for exposure to a student body that holds high expectation of quality assistance. No one that is familiar with the Writing Center will deny the Competency of assistance that is delivered by Writing Center personnel. In June 2011, myself and three other individuals accepted positions as peer writing assistants for the LCC Writing Center. We took the positions with the expectation of being reclassified to part-time staff, as all previous PWA’s have. We performed our duties alongside other properly classified PWA’s with the prospect of equal pay for equal work. Prior to returning to our posts this spring, we were informed of a delay in classification. We returned to work with the expectation of resolution to the classification matter. To date this matter has not been resolved, and we perform equal duties with no appropriate classification for proper remuneration. Therefore, three of the affected PWA’s will not be assisting in the summer or returning in the fall. The decision not to return is a principled one resulting from the inaction over proper classification, and something we view as a disregard for our dignity, in assuming we would not take issue with such an obvious disparity in the equal treatment of employees. I am a retired insurance professional with a 35 year proven track record of success, having received many professional awards for distinction in my field. I now seek knowledge, so I came to LCC, and was honored to lend my talents to the Writing Center; especially since the center was there to assist my children while they attended LCC. Therefore, I cannot reason out the logic behind the unethical behavior of any who will not own the irrational choice not too reclassify these PWA’s. Allowing three extremely competent individuals to leave over the trivial matter of classification is overtly irresponsible. I mention personal responsibility because a straight answer by the responsible party to date has been elusive. Until now, responses have only been conjecture of what is actually transpiring. One is left to wonder if this ethics of avoidance and inequity in classification can be universally applied to the LCC community. Giving an answer that demonstrates how this new policy can offer consistency in fairness and can be universally applied to this entire institution will give me a peace of mind that will allow me to leave the Writing Center with the same pride I had when joining it. I landscape for a hobby and I am often asked to supply boulders. I then caution the individuals that large immovable objects must be carefully placed, because once the heavy equipment is gone, one is either left with something aesthetically pleasing or an eye sore that one is always laminating and working around. Such is becoming the nature of some of LCC’s decisions. The only attributes of large immovable objects it that those that are remaining are large, cold, unfeeling and silently casting a shadow on what was once. Thank you for your time.

Deb Bishop: Thank you for letting me speak tonight. I’m Deb Bishop, a faculty member in social science and humanities and have been a member of this faculty for over 20 years. I have also served on a Board of Education in Perry School District for over 10 years. Therefore, I am familiar with how boards work and I am familiar with procedures. I attended the last board meeting when a letter of no confidence was presented. Frankly, I was very disappointed by the lack of response by the Board in what appeared to be a very clear intent to shut down any discussion concerning that letter of no confidence. I found that the Board was very heavy-handed and ethically questionable by not allowing Sally Pierce to respond after her email was read into the minutes. I found it unethical, particularly because that email was not addressed or forwarded to the Board by her. I was astounded by the presumption the Board made in tying that letter of no confidence into contract negotiations. They are clearly separate issues. Finally, I was dismayed when I read an article in the student newspaper that Trustee Hollister was quoted as saying “he heard a lot of people urging the contract to be settled.” I did hear that, but I also heard much more. I heard a faculty that feels unheard, unappreciated, and alienated. Quite frankly, I think what happened at the last Board meeting only fueled those fires and provided more reasons for the faculty to continue to feel this way.

Action Item – Capital Project Budget/Facilities Improvements and Renovation for Mackinaw Building, West Campus and Mason Jewett Airport.

Trustee Canja asked for the breakdown of the project totaling $5.2 million.

Chris Strugar-Fritsch answered $1.4 million for the Mackinaw Building, $1.76 million for West Campus and $2 million for Mason Jewett Airport.

Trustee Canja asked if the money to fund these projects was coming out of the amount approved to fund the A&S match. She stated that she asks the question because there are many other things the college could spend that money on, but there has been no discussion on it. She further stated that because the money was previously being used for the A&S match and is now being used for something else, considerations for the use of these funds should have come before the Board. Trustee Canja stated there should be a discussion on what money the college has, where it is going and what other projects the college is giving up by funding this project. She stated that there are a lot of one-time expenses the college could also fund.

Dr. Knight stated they plan to recommend a bond issue and keep principal and interest payments the same going forward.

Trustee Canja stated that at the last meeting she asked if the college was going to issue a bond for the A&S match and was told it was prudent to put that money aside and save. She stated she is only bringing this up because there are a number of capital project expenditures for other types of initiatives, that are not on-going operational expenditures, that are not being discussed.

Dr. Knight stated that he is not familiar with any capital projects that would be unfunded. He stated that these items are coming before the Board because the schedule for completion, of the Mackinaw Building, West Campus, and Mason Jewett, is driven by the need to get ready for classes. He further stated that the money would not be taken away from anything and would be part of the college’s capital project.

Trustee Canja stated that the money came from a tuition increase, layoffs and budget cuts. She stated that because of this she wants to make sure that what the college spends is fully in line with the college’s priorities. She further stated she is not saying these projects aren’t worthy, but when there is discussion about a tuition increase and budget cuts, she wants to make sure there is a balance between what is desired and what the college must have. Trustee Canja stated that items come before the Board piecemeal and the Board approves them and before you know it the money is used up.
Lisa Webb Sharpe stated the Board was a supporter of the Early College and part of the money is to expand the college’s ability to have more students in the Early College. She also stated that part of the money is to move the college’s CIT program and expand it out at the West Campus as well as expand the college’s HVAC program. She further stated that the Board spent money to purchase the Mason Airport hanger and part of these funds are to make that program viable and to have it grow. Lisa Webb Sharpe stated the goal for the projects being forwarded is to get them in place so that students can start them in the fall. She stated the Administration asked the Board to set aside money for capital projects and that A&S and Gannon were used as examples, but weren’t the only projects that the Administration was asking the Board to set aside. She further stated that the Capital Outlay committee has not met and the college does not have its construction authorization yet for Arts and Sciences. She stated that rather than hold money and wait until the legislators act, LCC has projects that need to get going now in order to have spaces renovated for fall classes. She further stated that what is being forwarded for approval is consistent with prior actions the Board has taken by purchasing the Mason hanger and creating the Early College.

Trustee Canja went on record as saying that she supports the Early College and its expansion but might not vote in favor of the proposal.

IT WAS MOVED by Trustee Woods and supported by Trustee Rasmusson that the Capital Project Budget for Facilities Improvements Renovation for the Mackinaw Building, West Campus and Mason Jewett Airport be approved.
